About me

I have recently retired from public health research at Flinders University. Much of this involved working with local governments which has given me the experience and skills to contribute effectively on Council. I am passionate about community health and wellbeing and believe that local government has a key role in providing built and natural environments to enable people to live healthy, safe, productive and sustainable lives. I am particularly keen for Mitcham to enhance amenities for our older and younger residents.

I have lived in Boorman ward for over 20 years. I am independent and, if elected, aim to represent residents by working collaboratively with fellow Councillors for the benefit of all. I believe that the City of Mitcham is a great place to live and I am enthusiastic about building on past achievements and helping to ensure our City continues to develop in a way that will bring positive outcomes for all our residents.

I am keen to explore community views on what is important for Mitcham and would be happy to hear from you.
